Eckerd as a History Maker

Here we are friends, celebrating the twenty-fifth anniversary of a small, intimate college. A place that is more than a school, and much more than just a learning institution; a place so many of us are proud to call home. Like all new-borns, Eckerd College had its trials and tribulations while learning how to grow. Students today, similar to those twenty-five years ago, share in some of the same dilemmas and good times. There is, for example, the first formal dance at St. Petersburg's Soreno Hotel on December 14, 1960. Over one-hundred students and faculty members danced to the music of Tony Esposito and orchestra. Or

... do you remember the first time you did your wash? All there was to it was finding the correct change, shoving all the clothes in, emptying the soap box and turning it on. What a way to learn ... Here is a clip of an article that was run in the December 1960 issue of Trident (now referred to as the Eckspress.)

"If you want to clean a pair of tennis shoes, don't put six sheets, two sweat-shirts, and half dozen shirts in the washer with them. Believe it or not, washers have a maximum load capacity. When things start bulging out the top even after you've crammed them down and put bricks on the top to keep them in—it's safe to judge that the washer is a wee mite too full. On the other hand it does not take 120 minutes worth of hot air to dry a load of two shoes and two laces."

Does this sound familiar? Why doesn't college come with an instruction sheet? Then there's the major dilemma of "what will we eat?" obviously not food, or is it? Even today, Saga's meals don't compare to mom's homemade meals, but they have improved over the years.

At least now they have decent materials to work with, not the equipment that was sitting around since before the war.

As a college, our campus and community has grown extremely fast. In 1960 there were five clubs and organizations one could participate in. These included Chemistry, Dramatics, French, German, and Spanish. Today a student has over sixty-four clubs to choose from: beginning with ECOS administration all the way to tour guides.

I'm sure everyone attending school in Florida can relate to the Saturdays on the beach. In 1961, students' beach days consisted of box lunches, surf boards, swimming, 15¢ hot dogs, and 5¢ cokes. Now, a few years later, students find themselves at the beach's "hot spot" watching activities such as jet-ski racing and para-sailing.

We must also remember the serious aspects of Eckerd College life. In September, 1958, our first president, President William Kadel, took office and the decision was made that St. Petersburg would be the site for the new college. In the beginning of 1960, Florida Presbyterian College began its academic year with 151 freshmen at an interim on Bayboro Harbour in St. Petersburg.

Accompanying the first few years of Florida Presbyterian College were the ever popular problems of every college: apathy and rules. Apathy proved to get the best of the students. There was no sight of recovery until the students became involved—such as a yearbook committee (which was formed in 1965). The Trident sent out pleas for writers and people to become involved with their social life. This hardly presents a problem for some of us today!

Pets on campus? At Florida Presbyterian College it was absolutely unthinkable to allow pets on campus. The Trident felt the same about the situation when they stated that they didn't want the reputation of being, "a flea bitten institution."

As FPC moved into its third year, it began to deal with major social problems, such as integration. In May of 1962, a black student, Howard Kennedy, was admitted to FPC as a junior transfer student. Howard had the proper credentials and filled all the requirements necessary to become a student. As soon as the Board of Trustees heard that a black student was admitted to our "lily-white school" they overturned the Admission's decision. In disgust and disbelief, a major portion of our, "fine, dedicated staff" handed in their resignation. The resignation letters were put in a drawer over the summer while the Board of Trustees reconsidered their decisions. The next fall semester, black students were admitted as FPC students. Unfortunately, Howard Kennedy had found another school.

Apathy, apathy . . . Yes, apathy was still evident at FPC. Due to the lack of social events, a new gameroom was opened on campus consisting of cards, board games, etc. . . . To add icing to the cake, confusion still existed about the voting policies of Student Government.

Five years after the birth of FPC, the Student Government began reconsidering the dorms and the rules that govern them. "As the rules stood, visitors of the opposite sex could only visit in the lounge areas." Rules were passed in 1966 that allowed open houses on Sundays, provided notice was given to the campus community by the dorms wishing to have open dorms. Curfew hours were also extended for senior females. They could remain out until 12:00 on week days, one AM on Fridays, and two AM Saturdays, thanks to President Kadel.

During the next few years President Kadel and the students of FPC engaged in a "serious run-a-round." The students were displeased with Kadel's attitude, especially when he felt that it was necessary to, apologize for their long hair while speaking off campus. And he stated his disbelief and unwillingness to accept the fact that FPC had been charged with housing drugs during the "Great Drug Bust." President Kadel resigned soon after to accept an administrative position with the Board of Christian Education of the Presbyterian Church.

The next person to fill the position of president was Billy O. Wireman. during his years at FPC he advanced from athletic Director and basketball coach, to Dean of Men, Vice-President of Development. As he took the final step to Presidency, he took with him the respect and personal friendship of many students.

One of Wireman's most memorable decisions was to improve on dorms and the dorm life. Women over 21 had no designated dorm hours, she only needed to fill out an off campus pass. Freshmen girls were the only students to have "strict" restrictions. Open dorms and co-ed dorms, a dream of the students, soon became a reality thanks to Wireman.

Convocation

The Eckerd College 25th annual Convocation took place on Wednesday September 12th, 1984. This was a special occasion in a series honoring our first 25 years in existence. The Convocation ceremony was held in Griffin Chapel. The opening prayer was delivered by Dean Chapin prior to which two tardy faculty members slipped into their places while adjusting their caps and robes. Dr. Peter Armacost then proceeded to greet the college and community. The overall turn out of students was quite impressive. President Armacost wanted to thank all who had been involved in the past 25 years of our charter. Then he introduced distinguished guests, faculty, and past students.

There were two alumni of the first graduating class in attendance, Howard Carter and Carolyn (Hall) Horton. Mrs. Horton said she had seen many changes since she studied here. She also said that the core curriculum she was in 25 years ago was similar to the program used at Eck Tech today. President Armacost also read a message from our distinguished board member Jack Eckerd which sited Eckerd College as a fine institution and expressed thanks to all who had been involved in it's history. Uncle Peter then introduced the first and second presidents of Eckerd College, Dr. William Kadel and Dr. Billy Wireman. Seldom does a college president have the opportunity to introduce all of his predecessors. Dr. Kadel, a spry looking grey haired gentleman, said he was glad to be here. Also, he was happy to see Eckerd was still seeking to present a challenge to anyone willing to listen. He said he was glad to see there were still cocky people here. Dr. Kadel told a couple of amusing stories. One being about the time he and another college official went to ask President Dwight D. Eisenhower to be our first honorary alumnus. They were scheduled to spend only ten minutes with the president. Everything was worked out to the second. Yet, after he was asked to accept the degree, Ike proceeded to ask them, two men who had just started a college and really were not experienced, about private education in America. They spent thirty minutes in the Oval Office.

Dr. Kadel told the community about the first official event at Florida Presbyterian College, a prayer was said in an empty store front in Orlando. The prayer asked for guidance in beginning a college. In closing, Dr. Kadel, speaking of today's Eckerd College, stated one parting remark, "Well, I'll be damned!"

President Armacost introduced the second President, Billy Wireman. Dr. Wireman said that the concern for money at Eckerd was not new. He also told why he was attracted to the school. He was only 27 years old when he first approached Dr. Kadel. He spoke of Eckerd as a dream that our founders had envisioned. Dr. Wireman then proceeded to remember the 60's, John Kennedy's election, and Camelot, also, the impact of the invasion of Israel on the college. He went on to discuss the idea that we should never lose sight of our goals, and to keep the dream alive. These were the dreams of Eckerd during his administration. Also, mentioned was the prospect of College Harbor which is being built out behind the gymnasium. This project is being built for ASPEC members. It brings together the imaginations and dreams of youth and elders. Chaplain David Cozad delivered the Benediction and a reception followed in Fox Hall. There was punch and Hors d'oeuvres catered by Saga.

More lenient restrictions on pets and beer followed shortly after. Nonetheless FPC soon became an enjoyable, more independent place to live.

During the 1970's, FPC faced some serious financial problems. Until this time, the college was run by two prominent Presbyterian Churches of St. Pete. The government expanded the amount of money used for higher education, money that was much needed by FPC to help pay-off its short term bank loans. According to the First Amendment in the Constitution, church and state could not mix. Therefore, FPC was unable to collect any governmental funds for aid. In appreciation to Jack Eckerd, a personal friend of Wireman's, for the vast amount of money he donated FPC was able to get back on its feet. To show its gratitude FPC changed it's name to Eckerd College.

The most eventful and probably most predominate revolt by students took place in Brown Hall in 1972. A black Eckerd student and about 25 of his fellow black classmates occupied the pub (then the bowling alley) in Brown Hall. The students were protesting racism. Outside the gameroom stood over 200 students offering their support for their friends and classmates. After about 24 hours the administration agreed to meet with the students to negotiate their demands. "Over the next two weeks the negotiations produced a five year plan that high-lighted a better Afro-American studies program, a recruitment effort to tempt black students to Eckerd, and an increased understanding of black and white problems."

Throughout the remaining years of Eckerd College's life until now, the school went through changes ranging from yearbook publications, change in dorm life to a more lenient atmosphere, female and minority rights became dominant, to the opening of the Pub, to Eckerd College as it is today, home.

In conclusion, with many thanks to everyone, students and faculty alike, Eckerd College has become a place of freedom in an established learning environment comparable to home-spiced with understanding and love. Eckerd has become the fine institution it is today.

I would like to thank Dale McConkey, Prof. Carlsten, and the librarians for the use of the archives in helping me gather information

The Wet Wild Kingdom

Well, competition has become intense in water wallowing area this year—that's for sure. Weekdays and weekends alike we see various animals of the Eckerd Sarenghetti make their way to various watering holes. Ah, observe the common autohaven as they sprint out of class throw their books in the back seat, and cruise gracefully yet swiftly across the plains to the great tide water at Mt. Don Cesar. (aka Pink Point) There they sleep, play odd games with paddles, soak themselves with grease and fake parilization, or oggle the opposite sexes of their breed behind mirrored eyes. Amazing! In the distance a herd of exotic Beach-too-farians that seem to be inconspicuously moving toward the waterspot at the gymnasium hills. A bashful group, they don't like the fact that they lack the physical means to get to Mt. Cesar so they try to avoid recognition. But, once at their watering hole they have their own activities. Males of the species do a masocist aerial dances from fixed platforms before landing in the water, treading back and forth all day between two particular points. And, they share the activities of their cousins the Autohavens, of greased, fake parilization and opposite sex oggling behind mirrored eyes. Of course, there are many distinctively different creatures roaming the plains. Most take similar action in beating the heat and killing the clock. So it is that watersports are a special part in the lives of the wild kingdom.

Life at Eck Tech

The alarm that was supposed to annoy me when it roused me from a sound sleep, didn't go off because of a power failure in the night. So my stupid clock set on the desk, flashing some absurd time at me and enjoying it all the while. I could tell it was hours into my first class and so I had achieved my morning annoyance fix in sort of a round about way. Stumbling out the doorway in nothing but a towel, I leisurely make my way to the shower. I do an about-face when I greet two maintenance ladies cleaning the shower. I'm not sure what day of the week it is, but I have a strong suspicion it's Monday. Feeling almost as grumpy as grubby, I take a dare from a guy in the hall, and go to lunch. We have chilidogs and tacos and I sprint back to the complex, steered towards the bathroom. The Pope could be in there for all I care—nobody's gonna stop me this time. Hey, look at this, my lucky day, toilet paper and every thing. My afternoon class seems to be dragging into an evening class. (That's funny—my schedual doesn't say anything about this) Remembering some thing about our house playing intramurals before dinner, I stroll out to the field to see what the story is, but I find out the story is that we lost in the championships the night before. By the time I get back it's dinner time and we actually stand in line, waiting to get in (irony of ironies). Well, dinner accomplished, I pretend to convince myself that I'm now going to settle in for about four or five serious hours of studying. Ok! So, I wind up making a compromise and spend a half hour in the library (Good half an hour at that)! Before long I'm drawn to the Pub and partake in the splendors of merriement for awhile. It starts to look a little late and I begin the journey back to my room. Sitting in bed I reflect on the day and organize all the errands, chores and assignments for tomorrow. I reach for the clock, set the alarm and look forward to the annoyances of tomorrow.

Bay's Alive

"The Bay is alive with the Sound of Music" Can it be Julie Andrews in shades and O.P. wear twisting to the tunes of her walkman? No, it's just another Eckerd College student on her way to class. Campus '84-85 is indeed a rockin' an a boppin' and a swingin' and a breakin' again this year. Music is as big a part of life at Eckerd as is breathing and eating. Hey listen, you hear that—it's after dinner and you can hear the Epsilon boys start groovin' to some Bob Marley—do it boys! A visit to the pub will reveal your typical conservative weekday student strutting, pitcher in hand, to some ZZ Top or Boston on a Thursday night. Yes, everyone's tapping their toes to something. While cruising through the ladies' hall one would come across some Lionel Richie, Journey, Madonna or Hall and Oats. Uh-oh, heads up, here comes a pack of faithful rockers. Yup—one guy's holding a blaring box and the others are jammin'; on their imaginary guitars to Van Halen or Def Leppard. Get it Fellas! Hey, how about that complex party last weekend? The masses were swayin' to some Michael J., Midnite Starr, and a little Prince—get down, people. There are still a great many believers in "Floydian" thinking as well as a few "Dead Heads" who are "Greatfully" so. Charlie Daniels, The Outlaws, and Alabama lovers are still fiddlin' around the range of the Eckerd campus while Billy Idol, David Bowie and The Talking Heads are shoulders above the rest. So there's a lot of diversity this year, but its music all the same. Whether it's MTV, or Solid Gold or Friday Night Videos or Albums or any of the many radio stations we're listening to we're never really without music. Yeah, I guess you could say we're all tuned in here at Eckerd College this year 'cause this school not only turns it on, we turn it up!

Operators

"Good afternoon, Eckerd College," is the cheerful greeting you hear when you dial 867-1166. But our campus operators are more vital than any caller could imagine. Betty Watson, Bridget Middlebrook, and Shirley Wilttrout keep this school running smoothly over the telephone wires. For those that work in the offices around campus these women provide access to all WATS lines and information for telephone numbers.

However, these women are probably most appreciated by freshmen and ELS students. For it is here that the connection by telephone is arranged. Whenever an ELS student needs to call home a trek is made to the operator. For the Freshmen Blues the operators provide a cure with just one phone call to home.

So, next time you hear that familiar greeting remember these ladies are extra-special in the day-to-day running of Eckerd College.

Imagine yourself in an auditorium on a cool fall evening, standing shoulder to shoulder with people you hardly know. As you look around you see there's not an empty seat left; hardly even standing room. This situation occurred not once, but twice during October on Eckerd College Campus. What or who brought so many people out of hiding? Our Eckerd College guests, respected and interesting to many ... Ed Bradley from 60 Minutes and West Germany's Ex-Chancellor Helmut Schmidt.

On the evening of October 15, Ed Bradley spoke to the students and guests of Eckerd College about everything from his job to economics, to his views in politics. Ed Bradley opened with a short speech of gratitude and thanks to the Afro-American Society for their organization and help. He then left the floor open to a total and very enjoyable question and answer session. Ed Bradley has, in the past, worked with CBS, WCBs Radio, visited Vietnam and Cambodia along with many other places, worked with the Carter campaign, then in the White House, and later as anchor man with Dan Rather and is now on 60 Minutes and enjoying every intriguing minute. When Ed Bradley was questioned by the audience about his views on the political debates—his response was strong and optimistic—"There is a lot of courage in the debates this year, which is encouraging. What is not encouraging is the lack of interest and concern in people about the presidential election."

On October 19, Eckerd College was once again blessed with the honour of having a distinguished guest visit our school. West Germany's prior chancellor, Helmut Schmidt spoke with his audience about the much shared concern of economics and political situation of the world today. Helmut Schmidt opened his lecture with the hard to swallow idea that, "You think the world is in an economic upswing, this is not so, the world is in an economic crisis. Hunger and starvation is greater today than in the 70's." He then spoke of his idea about the bad and good characteristics of the American entrepreneur. He both patted us on the back, and offered some well-thought through advice. After his speech, Helmut Schmidt opened himself to a question and answer session from the audience. When confronted with the question, "If you could vote in the 1984 presidential election—would you vote for Mondale or Reagan?" Much to the audience's surprise and enjoyment, Helmut Schmidt answered, "I would definitely vote for ... Gerald Ford."

Election '84

WE ARE THE PEOPLE OF
THIS GENERATION, BRED IN AT LEAST MODEST COMFORT, HOUSED IN Universities & COLLEGES,

LOOKING UNCOMFORTABLY TO THE WORLD WE ARE ABOUT TO INHERIT.

The 1984 presidential elections was a history making event. For the first time a woman was running on a major party ticket. During the Democratic convention Walter Mondale chose Geraldine Ferraro of New York as his running mate against the Republican incumbent Ronald Reagan and George Bush. However, the strategies of Mondale did not succeed as Reagan won in a landslide election. Mondale carried only Washington D.C. and his home state of Minnesota in the electoral vote.

Students at Eckerd got involved in both campaigns. Predominately seen around campus were pro-Mondale signs. In a student mock election, though, Reagan won by a majority. However, there was a small turnout for the mock election just as for the real election.

All around the country college students were supporting Reagan. It seems as if Eckerd stands alongside the other colleges and universities. Yet, it was noted that students were still rebelling. As the last generation rebelled against conservatism, perhaps we rebelled against liberalism.

Restless Natives Celebrate

There is a legend about a day when the natives of Eckerd Islands got more than restless. That day has come to be known as Kontiki Day and, as the story goes on October 6th the word "celebration" was given a new meaning. Delta and Day Students sponsored the musical, recreational, water festival on the banks of the famed and ferocious "Frenchman's Rapids." Villagers came from all corners of the island to see things kick off with the ceremonial raft race. In the main event, the Delta tribe broke to an early lead and held off a last minute thrust by the people of Epsilon to win the race. However the Kappa-Sub is said to have stolen the show by winning the "Titanic Award" and a plaque "wreckognizing" their marine film footage of the creek bottom as "thoroughly outstanding!" Individual tribesman competed against each other all day in canoe and inner-tube races, as the masses on the banks swung to the music of the islands. There was feasting and drinking as the people rejoiced that the gods of the weekend had smiled on them. There was frisbee, volleyball and hackey-sac by day and when the moon was high in the sky, there was the magic of a "Delores Telescope" concert that no witch doctor could touch. Then in the wee morning hours of that Sunday a cloud slithered over the moon and all the people headed back to their homelands in the darkness for the celebration was over. The people of the Eckerd Islands will always remember that day and they will keep their souls open for a time when the sun again burns bright in the sky and beckons them together for Kontiki Day.

Extreme right, who could resist that face? Far right, "Here's to a good year!" Opposite middle and opposite bottom left, With the closing of Cowboy good times like these had to move elsewhere. Beach street became a popular place for wandering students. Opposite bottom right, For those that prefer the warm comforts of home Albertson's provides for a little fun.

"So what do you got to do at snazzy St. Petersburg?—The old folks capitol of the world!" My friend asked arrogantly during a recent telephone call.

"Well, you know," I stammered defensively. "We go to the beach and—"

"No, no," he interrupted, "I'm talkin' nightlife man! I'll bet you have a "junior citizens" card that gets you special discounts at the old movie house, huh?" He taunted, with a laugh.

Having had just about enough, I pulled up a chair, settled in comfortably and began:

"Not really. On Monday night I usually cruise down the road about six minutes to a place called "Cowboy," where I get nickle beers from 8:00 to 9:00. Then I jump down the road about five more minutes to "The Brown Derby" where they have mixed drinks for a dollar from 9:00 to 12:00. On Tuesdays I go to the campus pub for a few pitchers with the boys. Wednesdays I hit up a place called "Beachstreet" where they have three beers for a dollar all night. But if I'm in the mood I may make "The Brown Derby" for "Double-Bubble" (two shots in one drink) from 9:00 to 12:00. Thursdays I get myself a couple of six-packs and take in "Hillstreet Blues". Friday and Saturday nights it's $5.00 all you can drink at "Cowboy", but there's usually a wild party that I'm at on campus which is sponsored by the Student Activities Board. Sunday, I recover." Then very innocently I ask, "So how do you keep busy when the sun goes down over there?"

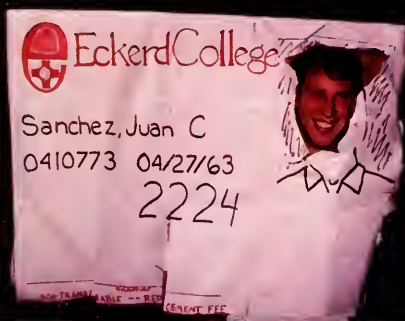

After a long silence he mumbles something about a Frat house and then quickly asks, "So how's the weather down there?"

Get-Up Gazing

Yes Virginia, there was a Zeta-Halloween dance this year and it left the phrase "trick or treat" up in the air, as was some good music, festive Jack-O-Lanterns, and a couple of spirited roof top spirits. It seemed all was unearthly but the rain which, masquerading as a passing shower, fell from the skies all night. However, the creatures that came out that night were not to be frightened away; for the wetter things got—the better things got. There was the "customary" line at the kegs and a "surprise line" (of Cocaine) winning the costume contest. While there was plenty of "get-up gazing", some partyers danced in pairs and others danced in groups (but all danced in puddles). The traditional field of vampires, witches and goblins outnumbered the hideous looking monsters that didn't wear costumes, and there were a good number of imaginative outfits that made the evening interesting. We all "identified" with the guy who came as a meal card and Bob Marley's guest appearance was a hit. But, I was a little disappointed that the Coors Beerwolf didn't show. That's alright though, the dance was a howling success anyway. Maybe we should change the phrase to "trick and treat" . . .

Trust Me

On Wednesday, November 14, Eckerd College Theatre presented "Faust Variations" by Marlowe, Goethe, Mann, Shelley, Weddington, McCullough, etc. . . . The production was directed by Professor Andra Weddington, assisted by David McCullough. Diane Durham was the stage manager, Jenny Hosein assisted her. Gregory Anderson was in charge of props. Sheri Hodgson designed the set; and Professor Richard Rice was in charge of lighting design. The play is based on the four different versions of the same story, about a man who sells his soul to the devil. The production begins in the Middle Ages. With a Good Angel floating over head and Mephistophilis arising from a trap, in Round I, Faust is dressed by devils, seduced by demons, entertains the court, meets Helen of Troy and if that is not enough, causes the death of a student and finally dies himself. In Round II Faust gets a reprieve. Now it's the age of Enlightenment. Here Faust with Meph's help meets some "wicked" witches and their imp, seduces a young girl, causes a revolution, kills an old couple and once again dies. Now in Round III, we get into the Frankenstein Era. Faust creates the Homo Superior, introduces him to a group of victorian dancers, gets married, is beat up by his own creature, it kills Elizabeth, the wife, and finally Faust goes crazy in the frozen Arctic and shoots himself. In Round IV, Faust wakes up from a night-mare, goes from scientist to politician to a construction worker with the help of his psychiatrist, Dr. Meph I. Stophilis, loses his wife, the whole world crashes in on him. But never fear all ends well. As I pass this to my editor, I can still hear my favorite line being said "Hey Jerry, gotcha a new helpa".

Sid Lives

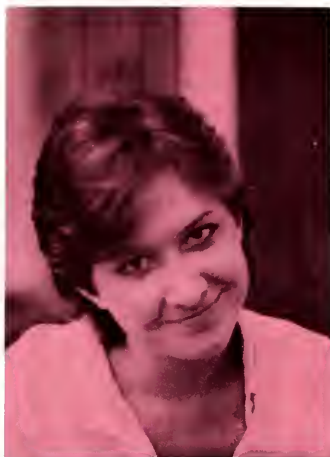

Dear Theo,

Life here at Eckerd is one uncanny experience after another. Last night was the annual Sid Vicious party. Publicity had been building up all week about what was to have been the wildest party of the year, thanks to anxious "Sid" veterans, telling tales of anarchy, freaky costumes and high voltage excitement, while foaming at the mouth. The event was to be held in the Khaotic Kappa Kourtyard where a group called "Dialogue" was supposed to lay out some hard rockin', Punk conversation. Alas, a brief shower chased the evening inside, as it was decided to ship the party to Fox Hall. But there was still enthusiasm in the halls and bathrooms as we made last minute preparations for the dance by ripping shirts and writing on pants (I am still scraping lipstick out of my ear as I write). Refusing to give up on "Sid", we piled into the place, and the die hards bounced to the blaring of "Dialogue" while the rest of us bumped into each other as we searched for the beerlines in the dark. So Theo, I wouldn't say "Sid" was a "Vicious" disappointment but it was far from "Pistol-Hot" that's for sure. That's all for now.

Insincerely,
Harry

Twelve lucky guys were chosen to grace the ornamental calendar which was sponsored by the girls of Benedict House and Darwin House. In the great tradition of the University of Southern California and UCLA and now Eckerd College courageous contestants strolled along the stage in the sardine-packed Pub. With such cuddly cuties and flowing beer a good time was guaranteed.

Geoffrey Holder

Geoffrey Holder appeared before a small but intimate audience on Tuesday, Feb. 26, 1985. Known for his acting roles in such films as Live and Let Die and The Gold Bug, Holder is most recognized for his 7-Up commercials. The evening was filled with song, dance, and good conversation. "Uncle Geoffrey", as the audience was told to call him, made the performance into a special "living room" type of gathering.

Born in Trinidad, he told the audience of his background and how he was influenced by the traditions of the islands. He then proceeded to demonstrate the music of his heritage.

Before he left he opened the floor to questions. Rather than give stock answers to what were probably the usual questions Holder injected his replies with spirited advice to everyone. He urged the audience to always ask questions for it is always better to know than not know something.

When the evening broke up the audience left with a feeling of just having made a new friend. For Geoffrey Holder that "star quality" of "touch-me-not" just does not exist. As the saying goes, "Never had it—never will!"

Homelycoming!!! That is the perfect description for what took place during the first weekend of December. Dorms across campus sent their most lovely "girls" to represent them in the Beauty Queen Contest. The annual East-West flag football game teamed a Zeta/Kappa/Day Student squad against a squad representing the dorms along Dorm Drive. In addition to the traditional activities, the crowds were entertained by a daring skydiving exhibition. Topping the celebration was the annual Homelycoming/Christmas dance. Couples danced the night away in a cafeteria transformed for the occasion.

Waterfront Program

ACTIVITIES/CLUBS

A unique feature of the Eckerd Waterfront is the community member's ability to use the facilities without membership in a formal club or organization. There are, however, many clubs and teams sponsored by the Waterfront for those interested. The TRITON SAILING TEAM sails in sloop and single-hand competitions against schools from Charlestown to Gainesville in SAISA (the South Atlantic Intercollegiate Sailing Association), while the TRITON BOARDSAILING TEAM competes in regattas both in and out of the collegiate circuit. Members of the TRITON WATERSKI TEAM compete in trick, slalom, and jump events against schools throughout the Florida Region. The WATERSPORTS ASSOCIATION is made up of students and staff who have a variety of watersports interests; recreational activities are planned throughout the year. One of the Waterfront's most unique student organizations is Eckerd College Search and Rescue. EC-SAR is a highly trained group of students and alumni who provide maritime search and rescue services to the Tampa Bay Boating Community.

INSTRUCTION

Waterfront classes are offered throughout the school year. Sailing classes are taught at all levels on both small sloops and larger yachts. Schedules and class information are available at the Boathouse. Normal class offerings include:

BEGINNING SAILING	BOARDSAILING
INTERMEDIATE SAILING	SCUBA
CRUISING	CPR

Seminars on specific areas of interest are held throughout the semester. Topics include Fishing in the Area, Boating Safety, and Freestyle Boardsailing. Students or staff with a specific interest are encouraged to request a special seminar from the Waterfront Staff. Informal dockside instruction is offered during the afternoons by waterfront staff and volunteers.

Tethered Muse

The literary magazine, The Tethered Muse, is published each Spring. For the past two years this collection of Eckerd students' creative writing has been organized and edited by Laura Ellen Brown. With the help of a few energetic souls she works furiously at the end of each Spring semester to produce a cultural publication.

A N N I V E R S A R Y

Go placidly amid the noise and the haste, and remember what peace there may be in silence.

As far as possible, without surrender, be on good terms with all persons. Speak your truth quietly and clearly; and listen to others, even to the dull and ignorant; they too have their story.

Avoid loud and aggressive persons; they are vexatious to the spirit.

If you compare yourself with others, you may become vain or bitter, for always there will be greater and lesser persons than yourself.

Enjoy your achievements as well as your plans. Keep interested in your own career, however humble; it is a real possession in the changing fortunes of time.

Exercise caution in your business affairs, for the world is full of trickery. But let this not blind you to what virtue there is; many persons strive for high ideals, and everywhere life is full of heroism.

Be yourself. Especially do not feign affection . . .

... Neither be cynical about love; for in the face of all aridity and disenchantment, it is as perennial as the grass.

Take kindly the counsel of the years, gracefully surrendering the things of youth. Nurture strength of spirit to shield you in sudden misfortune. But do not distress yourself with dark imaginings. Many fears are born of fatigue and loneliness.

Beyond a wholesome discipline, be gentle with yourself.

Your are a child of the universe no less than the trees and the stars; you have a right to be here.

And whether or not it is clear to you, no doubt the universe is unfolding as it should. Therefore be at peace with God, whatever you conceive Him to be.

And whatever your labors and aspirations, in the noisy confusion of life, keep peace in your soul.

With all its sham, drudgery and broken dreams, it is still a beautiful world. Be cheerful. Strive to be happy.

After slaving through the year to produce the LOGOS 85 the yearbook staff can now breathe a sigh of relief. It is all over on our part but not on that of the reader. As the years pass it will be your responsibility to reread this yearbook and remember all of the special times at Eckerd College.

As editor-in-chief I would like to thank some very special people without whom the LOGOS 85 would never have made it:

Jim Cobb, Herff Jones Representative
Belle Simmons, our Customer Service Adviser
Herff Jones Publishing Company
Lisa Andrews, sent from Heaven, this is her book.
Karen Eubanks, talented and a great help.
